Hi Bryant,

FYI, Lard Oil/PPM is still awaiting sampling plan approval from DEQ, so confirmation sampling won't happen until next week at the earliest. I'll continue to keep in touch with them.

Thanks, -keith

Subject: Lard Oil - Update

Hi Bryant,

1- DEQ has still not approved Lard/PPM's sampling plan, so they have not collected any soil confirmation samples as of mid-afternoon today. PPM has excavated visibly stained soils on the Lard Oil property and at 4 residences and are awaiting Plan approval before sampling and backfilling. Larry documented the excavation of the Lard Oil property and of 1 residence last week; I am awaiting word on their plan approval before mobilizing back to the site this week and then I plan to document the remaining excavated residential areas and the confirmation sampling.

Also, Lard/PPM has collected no indoor sampling to date, neither Sumaa canister air samples nor surface wipe samples. To the extent that they're still planning on doing this, this activity also awaits sample plan approval.

2- Just got word from PPM that Lard has identified additional product (i.e., different from the 3 oils that we sampled earlier) that they believe was spilled during the flood. PPM says 4 different product types are being delivered in bulk to Lard this afternoon. Do you want me to sample for fingerprinting when I mobilize to document their soil sampling?

Thanks, -keith
